It is recognized that the artwork(s) _____ in your possession, may naturally undergo changes in its material(s) and surface over time. The artwork(s) may be susceptible to atmospheric/environmental influences that can impact its appearance. This susceptibility is intentional, as the artwork(s) is designed to act with the atmospheric/environmental conditions of its surroundings. Such alterations are inherent to the work of art and the artistic process. They serve to reflect its existence in the present and validate the original conceptualization. Such changes are not defects but rather fundamental aspects of the artwork and the artist's intentions.

As the owner, you are advised against attempting to treat or clean the surface. Any interruption of the process or any preservation/restoration technique may compromise the integrity of the work and may invalidate the "artwork" by Mary Ellen Carroll/MEC studios. It will also render the work of art and the accompanying copyright ineffective as it will counter the intended aesthetic and integrity of the work of art.

By acquiring or possessing the artwork(s), you acknowledge and accept the aforementioned conditions. The artist and/or seller shall not be held liable for any changes or consequences resulting from atmospheric/environmental exposure.

As the owner, your compliance with this disclaimer is legally binding as it ensures the preservation and appreciation of the artwork and the artist's intention regarding the impact of the atmospheric/environmental conditions on the work of art. These conditions and the effects are inseparable from the work of art itself and are transferred with it, irrespective of changes in ownership. These conditions apply in perpetuity for the duration of the existence of the work of art.
